WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

An upper level high pressure ridge over the west coast will bring dry conditions through the short term forecast period. Daytime highs are forecast to run from 5 to 10 degrees above normal for this time of year with overnight minimums also a bit above normal. Short term weather models ride a couple of shortwave systems over the ridge and into the Pacific Northwest around mid and end of the week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A weak upper level disturbance will bring brief onshore flow and slightly cooler conditions today. High temperatures will then rebound through the remainder of the week as high pressure and weak offshore flow develop. No precipitation expected through the weekend.
